10. William Kinsella, 26, Central Jersey TC 2:52:48

Women

No finishers

Fred Lebow and Vince Chiappetta co-directed the first New York City Marathon, held entirely in Central Park. The race attracted 127 entrants and featured a course of four-plus loops. Only 55 men finished. Nina Kuscsik, the sole female entrant, dropped out due to illness. Award winners received recycled baseball and bowling trophies and inexpensive wristwatches purchased with Lebow's own money. The entry fee was $1 and the total event budget was $1,000.

1971 — SEPTEMBER 19

Men

1. Norman Higgins, 34, New London, CT 2:22:54
2. Chuck Ceronsky, 23, Twin Cities TC 2:33:21
3. Max White, 20, Boston AA 2:33:52
4. Tom Derderian, 22, New Medford, MA 2:37:13
5. Hugh Sweeny, 25, Millrose AA 2:37:42

10. Eric Walther, 33, St. Anthony BC 2:40:52

Women

1. Beth Bonner, 19, Wilmington, DE 2:55:22
2. Nina Kuscsik, 32, Huntington Station, NY 2:56:04
3. Sara Berman, 35, Cambridge, MA 3:08:46
4. Pat Tarnawsky, 35, NY 4:45:37

Female winner Beth Bonner and runner-up Nina Kuscsik became the first two women to officially break 3:00. Norman Higgins, the male champion, travelled from his home in Connecticut to run a 5K cross country race in the Bronx but took a detour to Manhattan when he heard about the marathon. Higgins' margin of victory (10:27) remains the largest in the men's race history. The finish banner was printed only on the runners' side, so photographers' shots of the finish featured a blank banner. Both sides of the banner were printed the following year.

Women

1. Nina Kuscsik, 33, Huntington Station, NY 3:08:41
2. Pat Barrett, 35, Shore AC 3:19:33

In protest of an Amateur Athletics Union (AAU) requirement that women start 10 minutes before men, the six female entrants sat on the starting line for 10 minutes, then started with the men. The AAU was sued for discrimination when it added 10 minutes to the women's times. Thanks to the marathon's growing popularity, male winner Sheldon Karlin returned as a celebrity to the University of Maryland when his victory made the local sports pages. Nina Kuscsik's win made her the first woman to reign concurrently as New York City and Boston Marathon champion.

9. Toni Plantamura, 23, NJ 3:22:29
10. Jane Killion, 27, New York, NY 3:25:01

Race director Fred Lebow and 2,090 entrants took the New York City Marathon to the streets of the city in an event uniting the five boroughs in a moving celebration of sport and diversity. The course included five bridges and a flight of stairs. New sponsors, including the Rudin Family, Manufacturers Hanover, and New Times magazine, helped defray the increased costs, while NYRR staff and volunteers handled the innumerable logistical details. Winners Bill Rodgers and Miki Gorman both shattered the event records. Gorman's time, which she ran at age 41, was the second-fastest women's marathon to date.

1977 — OCTOBER 23

Men

1. Bill Rodgers, 29, Melrose, MA 2:11:28
2. Jerome Drayton, 32, Canada 2:13:52

9. Nicki Hobson, 46, San Diego, CA 3:00:12
10. Gale Jones, 24, Unionville, CT 3:02:46

A total of 4,821 finishers, including 36 men under 2:20, joined repeat winners Bill Rodgers and Miki Gorman to make the 1977 race the world's largest marathon to date. Organizers carpeted the Queensboro Bridge; in 1976 third-place finisher Chris Stewart had finished the race with bloodied feet. In Manhattan, the course added a long stretch up First Avenue. Finishers received Mylar blankets at the finish for the first time.

1978 — OCTOBER 28

Men

1. Bill Rodgers, 30, Melrose, MA 2:12:12
2. Ian Thompson, 29, Great Britain 2:14:12

7. Nancy Shafer, 27, Gainesville, FL 2:52:20
8. Carol Young, 28, Berkeley, CA 2:52:28
9. Glynnis Penny, 27, Great Britain 2:53:35
10. Deborah Butterfield, 26, Bermuda 2:53:42

Female winner Grete Waitz of Norway ran a world-record 2:32:30 in her first attempt at the marathon; she finished nine minutes ahead of runner-up Marty Cooksey. Bill Rodgers overcame 80-degree temperatures to become the race's first three-time winner. Multiple finish lines were used for the first time, and runners' race numbers featured bar codes. For the second time the race served as the American women's championship.

Bill Rodgers won the race for the fourth consecutive time; he retains the record for most event wins by a male runner. The marathon was broadcast live on television for the first time. Prize money to the top finishers increased substantially, but it was still awarded under the table in the waning days of the "amateur" era. Participants included runners from all 50 states and from 56 countries.

| 9. Gayle Olinek, 27, Canada | 2:41:32 |
| 10. Jean Chodnicki, 21, Saddle Brook, NJ | 2:43:33 |

NCAA Champion Alberto Salazar boldly predicted he would run sub-2:10 in his first marathon. He made good on his promise by winning in 2:09:41, then the fastest-ever debut by an American. Grete Waitz captured her third straight victory and set another world record, and runner-up Patti Lyons-Catalano became the first American woman to break 2:30.

9. Julie Brown, 25, San Diego, CA 2:40:48
10. Sarah Quinn, 23, New York, NY 2:42:50

ABC Sports broadcast the race nationally for the first time. Winners Alberto Salazar and Allison Roe set world records. Though the course was later found to be 150 meters short upon remeasurement using updated standards, it was considered accurate according to standards accepted at the time.

1982 — OCTOBER 24

Men

1. Alberto Salazar, 24, Eugene, OR 2:09:29
2. Rodolfo Gomez, 31, Mexico 2:09:33
3. Daniel Schleslinger, 27, Raleigh, NC 2:11:54

9. Carla Beurskens, 30, Netherlands 2:35:37
10. Nancy Ditz, 28, Santa Clara, CA 2:38:08

Race leaders Alberto Salazar and Mexico's Rodolfo Gomez entered Central Park at Columbus Circle running stride for stride, and not until they were almost within sight of the finish was Salazar able to pull ahead for the win. Grete Waitz won for the fourth time and American middle-distance standout Julie Brown was the runner-up.

9. Rita Marchisio, 34, Italy	2:41:18
10. Laura L. Albers, 27, Grand Rapids, MI	2:42:12

Orlando Pizzolato's winning time of 2:14:53 remains the slowest ever on the five-borough course. Temperatures of near 80 degrees and 90 percent humidity caused an unusually high rate of non-finishers. The conditions prompted race officials to push back the race date to November starting in 1986. For the first time the event awarded prize money openly to the top finishers.

1985 — OCTOBER 27

Men

1. Orlando Pizzolato, 27, Italy	2:11:34

9. Christa Vahlensieck, 37, Germany	2:38:12
10. Sharlet Gilbert, 35, Richmond, CA	2:38:24

The field of 20,502 runners, an increase of nearly 4,000 from 1985, included athletes from 80 countries. Gianni Poli of Italy was the surprise men's winner, and Grete Waitz won for the eighth time on the women's side. For the second consecutive year, fewer than 100 starters dropped out of the race, for a better than 98-percent finishing rate.

| 9. Graziella Striuli, 42, Italy | 2:40:13 |
| 10. Carmen de Oliveira, 26, Brazil | 2:40:57 |

Liz McColgan clocked the fastest debut marathon to date to win the women's race. The victory came less than a year after she give birth to her first child and two months after she won the IAAF World Championships 10,000 meters. In the men's race, Salvador Garcia claimed the title in a personal best as fellow Mexicans Andrés Espinosa and Isidro Rico took second and fifth. Anticipating a reduction in international entries due to the Persian Gulf War, officials added 1,500 American applicants to the race, swelling the starting field to nearly 27,000.

1992 — NOVEMBER 1

Men

9. Irina Bogacheva, 31, Kyrgyzstan 2:34:31
10. Kerstin Pressler, 30, Germany 2:34:52

Fred Lebow, in remission from brain cancer, ran his first five-borough New York City Marathon. With Grete Waitz at his side every step of the way, Lebow finished tearfully in 5:32:34. Liberated by the lifting of international sanctions against South African athletes, Willie Mtolo won the men's race. Lisa Ondieki's 2:24:40 winning time set a new course record and placed her 40th overall, the highest placing by a woman since 1976. The starting field of 28,656 included runners from the newly sovereign nations of Croatia, Slovenia, and Kyrgyzstan.

1993 — NOVEMBER 14

Men

1. Andrés Espinosa, 30, Mexico 2:10:04
2. Bob Kempainen, 27, Minnetonka, MN 2:11:03

7. Ramila Burangulova, 32, Russia 2:36:13
8. Nadezhda Ilyina, 29, Russia 2:37:58
9. Crystal Rogiers, 30, Belgium 2:38:41
10. Lyubov Klochko, 34, Ukraine 2:41:44

Mexico's Andrés Espinosa scored a victory after second-place finishes in 1991 and 1992. Bob Kempainen's runner-up finish, coupled with Keith Brantly's fifth place, ended an American drought in the top 10. Uta Pippig claimed the women's title in a personal best; she would subsequently win three times in Boston.

1994 — NOVEMBER 6

Men

1. Germán Silva, 26, Mexico 2:11:21
2. Benjamín Paredes, 33, Mexico 2:11:23

9. Alena Peterkova, 33, Czech Republic 2:35:43
10. Nadezhda Ilyina, 30, Russia 2:38:42

The 25th running saw Allan Steinfeld serve as race director following the death of Fred Lebow on October 9. Germán Silva took a wrong turn into Central Park in the 26th mile before realizing his mistake, turning around, and catching and passing training partner and compatriot Benjamín Paredes for the win.

Women's champ Tegla Loroupe was the first female African winner of a major marathon.

| 9. Jeanne Peterson, 27, Atlanta, GA | 2:38:05 |
| 10. Gadisa Edato, 33, Ethiopia | 2:40:44 |

Male winner Giacomo Leone of Italy was overlooked in pre-race predictions amidst a talented field of Kenyans. Leone clinched his victory with final miles of 4:40 and 4:41. The palindromically-named Anuta Catuna, who comes from the same Transylvanian region of Romania as did Fred Lebow, won in a national record.

| 9. Elena Vinitaskaia, 25, Belarus | 2:36:53 |
| 10. Marcia Narloch, 29, Brazil | 2:37:33 |

Nine men were still in contention at 22 miles, and three vied for top honors until the very end. John Kagwe finally kicked to his second straight victory, followed closely by Joseph Chebet and Zebedayo Bayo. Franca Fiacconi set an Italian record with her win after leaving Tegla Loroupe and Adriana Fernandez behind at the 20-mile mark.

While the marathon has always been an exercise in community spirit, with more than two million spectators lining the streets in support, that aspect of the race was most apparent in November 2001, less than two months after the September 11 terrorist attacks. The race became an occasion for hope and renewal among participants, spectators, and all New Yorkers, and patriotism ran high as the marathon hosted the USA Marathon Championships. Deena Drossin (later Kastor) ran 2:26:58, the fastest debut by an American woman, to win the national title. The race had a significant course change, with runners entering Central Park at 90th Street instead of 102nd Street and thereby eliminating a short but steep hill. The wheelchair contest offered prize money for the first time—a total of $10,500.

For the first time in a major U.S. marathon, the women’s professional field started separately, 35 minutes before the professional men and the rest of the field. The separate women’s start highlighted the most competitive women’s field in race history. Joyce Chepchumba, after three top-five finishes, finally scored a victory. Legally blind Marla Runyan was fourth, the highest placing by an American since Kim Jones’ runner-up finish in 1989. Following his Boston Marathon victory, Rodgers Rop won in the third-fastest time ever in New York City. Krige Schabort and Cheri Blauwet won the wheelchair division, Schabort in event-record time. The inaugural New York Road Runners Foundation Team for Kids raised nearly $200,000 to help fund running programs for local schoolchildren.

ING, a global financial company, became the marathon’s title sponsor and joined with NYRR to initiate grassroots running and fitness programs among the city’s youth. To date, the ING Run for Something Better program had contributed more than half a million dollars to the City Parks Foundation and to the New York Road Runners Foundation Running Partners program, which together put running-based health and fitness programs in city parks and schools year-round. Margaret Okayo of Kenya broke her own event record, running 2:22:31 after a tough battle with Catherine Ndereba and Lornah Kiplagat, both of whom also finished under the old course mark. Kenyan Martin Lel took the men's title. Krige Schabort and Cheri Blauwet both defended their 2002 wheelchair titles and set event records. A record 34,729 people finished the marathon, making it the largest marathon in the United States for the second year in a row.

4. Miriam Nibley, 27, Savoy, IL 2:00:10
5. Christina Ripp, 24, Savoy, IL 2:03:14

A total of 36,562 finishers made the race the largest marathon of all-time to date. World record-holder Paula Radcliffe won the women's race by three seconds over Susan Chepkemei in the closest women's finish in race history. Hendrick Ramaala became the first South African winner since Willie Mtolo in 1992; American Meb Keflezighi was second, just 10 weeks after winning the silver medal at the Athens Olympics. Both wheelchair races were close contests, settled in thrilling sprints to the finish. Edith Hunkeler set an event record by six minutes.

4. Diane Roy, 34, Canada 1:59:30
5. Shirley Reilly, 20, Tucson, AZ 2:02:17

The race was once again the world's largest, with 37,597 starters and 36,856 finishers. World record-holder Paul Tergat of Kenya and defending champion Hendrick Ramaala of South Africa staged a down-to-the-wire battle to the finish, with Tergat edging out Ramaala by a mere three-tenths of a second in the closest race in event history. On the women's side, Jelena Prokopcuka battled back from fourth place late in the race to win in 2:24:41, only 14 seconds ahead of Kenya's Susan Chepkemei, to become the race's first Latvian champion. Ernst van Dyk of South Africa set an event record of 1:31:11 in winning the men's wheelchair race, and Edith Hunkeler defended her 2004 title, winning in 1:54:52.

4. Chantal Petitclerc, 36, Canada 1:56:16
5. Sandra Graf, 37, Switzerland 1:56:29

The race set a new world record for total finishers in a marathon with 37,869. Leading them was Marilson Gomes dos Santos of Brazil, who stole the race with a strong move on First Avenue. The chase pack, despite containing then-world record-holder and defending champion Paul Tergat, didn't respond in time; Gomes became the race's first South American winner with his 2:09:58. Tergat followed his Kenyan countryman Stephen Kiogora across the line a few seconds later. In the women's race, defending champion Jelena Prokopcuka shed her last pursuer, Tatiana Hladyr of Ukraine, just past 35K and won again in 2:25:05. Kurt Fearnley of Australia smashed the men's wheelchair event record and the 1:30 mark with his masterful solo 1:29:22; newcomer Amanda McGrory of Illinois won the women's wheelchair race in a thriller, two seconds ahead of Great Britain's Shelly Woods in 1:54:17.

Martin Lel of Kenya returned for his second New York City Marathon and outsprinted Morocco's Abderrahim Goumri to win again in 2:09:04, the day after Ryan Hall ran 2:09:03 to win the U.S. Olympic Team Trials - Men's Marathon, hosted by NYRR in Central Park. In a front-running tour de force, Paula Radcliffe of Great Britain led from the start and finally dropped Ethiopia's Gete Wami with 400 meters remaining; Radcliffe won in 2:23:09, one second faster than her winning time in 2004. Wami emerged with the inaugural World Marathon Majors crown; Kenya's Robert Kipkoeh Cheruiyot had already secured the men's title. In the women's wheelchair race, Edith Hunkeler returned to competition after a career-threatening injury and smashed her own event record by 49 seconds with her winning time of 1:52:38. Kurt Fearnley of Australia successfully defended his 2006 men's wheelchair title. The race once again broke its own world record for total finishers in a marathon with 38,607.

Abderrahim Goumri of Morocco, second in 2007, was alone in front and seemed headed for the win this time—until 2006 winner Marilson Gomes dos Santos of Brazil caught him with a half-mile to go and powered away.

Defending women's champion Paula Radcliffe rebounded from her second Olympic disappointment—she'd finished 23rd in Beijing on minimal training after a femoral stress fracture—by taking the lead from the gun and ratcheting up the pace until her last challengers had fallen away. She won by nearly two minutes. Ludmila Petrova of Russia set a world masters record of 2:25:43 in second, and Kara Goucher, in third, set an American marathon debut record of 2:25:53—faster than any American woman had ever run on the New York course. Wheelchair event record-holders Kurt Fearnley of Australia and Edith Hunkeler of Switzerland fought strong headwinds to win their third and fourth titles, respectively.

Meb Keflezighi, the 2004 Olympic silver medalist, pulled away from Robert Kipkoech Cheruiyot of Kenya with three miles to go and became the first American man to win the race since Alberto Salazar in 1982. His 2:09:15 was a personal best, and the win was his first ever in a marathon. 2008 Olympic marathon silver medalist Jaouad Gharib of Morocco took third. Double Olympic 10,000-meter champion Derartu Tulu became the first Ethiopian woman to win the race; she outsprinted Ludmila Petrova of Russia after the two had dropped France's Christelle Daunay, who held third place, and the defending champion Paula Radcliffe of Great Britain, who struggled to a fourth-place finish. Wheelchair race champions Edith Hunkeler of Switzerland and Kurt Fearnley of Australia both successfully defended their titles once again, giving Hunkeler her fifth title and Fearnley his fourth in a row. The wins didn't come easily, however—Hunkeler had to hold off a strong pack only seconds behind her, and Fearnley won a down-to-the-wire duel over new U.S. citizen Krige Schabort.

Gebre Gebremariam of Ethiopia, the 2009 IAAF World Cross Country champion, had never run a marathon before—but his countryman Haile Gebrselassie, about to drop out at 15 miles with a knee injury, told him that he must now win the race. He did so with a huge surge in the race’s last three miles in the sixth-fastest time in the race’s 41-year history. Kenya’s Edna Kiplagat had run one serious marathon before—a win in Los Angeles earlier in the year—and that experience gave her the edge on debutants Shalane Flanagan of the USA and Mary Keitany of Kenya. Kiplagat dropped them with two miles to go to complete a coast-to-coast double. Tatyana McFadden of the USA led the women’s wheelchair race from gun to tape to win by nearly six minutes, and Great Britain’s David Weir outsprinted Japan’s Masazumi Soejima by two seconds as they ended Aussie Kurt Fearnley’s four-year win streak. (Fearnley took third.) The 45,103 runners who crossed the finish line set yet another all-time record for total finishers in a marathon.

4. Wakako Tsuchida, 36, Japan 1:52:53
5. Christie Dawes, 31, Australia 1:52:54

Ideal weather and a deep competitive field produced the fastest men’s race in event history. Geoffrey Mutai of Kenya, coming off a mind-boggling 2:03:02 at Boston, slashed 2:36 from Tesfaye Jifar’s 10-year-old New York City Marathon event record with his 2:05:06. Second- and third-placers Emmanuel Mutai (no relation) of Kenya (2:06:18) and Tsegaye Kebede of Ethiopia (2:07:14) were also under the old mark. Kenyan Mary Keitany's bid for a similar performance lasted until about 16 miles; her 1:07:56 at halfway was under Paula Radcliffe's world-record pace, but she faded in the late stages and was passed by Ethiopians Firehiwot Dado and Buzunesh Deba, the latter of whom lives in the Bronx. Dado edged Deba, 2:23:15 to 2:23:19; Keitany hung on for third. In the wheelchair division, 2006 champion Amanda McGrory of the USA chopped 2:14 off Edith Hunkeler's event record with her runaway 1:50:24 victory, and Masazumi Soejima became the first Japanese winner of the race in any division after pulling away near 16 miles; four-time champion Kurt Fearnley of Australia took second. The race's 47,340 finishers was another marathon world record.

2012 — NOVEMBER 4

For the first time in event history, the New York City Marathon was cancelled. The week prior to the race, Superstorm Sandy had damaged much of the East Coast and left many New Yorkers without electricity, and in more severe cases, without homes. Many marathoners organized their own 26.2-mile runs on November 4, with the greatest numbers gathering in Central Park. Numerous groups of runners assisted with recovery efforts in some of New York City's hardest-hit areas, like Staten Island and Coney Island, offering any resources they had available to displaced residents. In the wake of the storm, NYRR made a donation of $1 million and, together with our partners, a $1.2 million donation of New York City Marathon supplies to the Mayor's Fund for the Advancement of New York City, to be used for Sandy relief and recovery efforts. Also donating to the Mayor's Fund were the Rudin family, who gave $1.1 million, and then-sponsor ING, which gave $500,000.

5. Susannah Scaroni, 22, Champaign, IL	2:05:07

The race returned bigger than ever, setting yet another all-time marathon record with its 50,266 finishers. The men's 2011 champion and event record-holder, Geoffrey Mutai of Kenya, reprised his dominant run of two years earlier, leaving his last rivals with seeming ease and cruising alone to the finish in 2:08:24. Tsegaye Kebede of Ethiopia, in second, claimed the World Marathon Majors title. New York–resident Ethiopian Buzunesh Deba had a lead of more than three minutes past halfway, but Kenya’s Priscah Jeptoo—who would wear the World Marathon Majors crown if she could win—made up the gap and relegated Deba to a second runner-up finish. Wheelchair racer Tatyana McFadden of the USA completed an unprecedented yearly Grand Slam of marathon wins (London, Boston, Chicago, New York) with her second NYC victory, and Swiss speedster Marcel Hug outsprinted four competitors in the final meters to win by less than one second.

In the race’s first year with Tata Consultancy Services as the title sponsor, the 2014 TCS New York City Marathon again set an all-time record with 50,530 finishers, including the race’s one-millionth finisher overall. The men’s and women’s professional runner races both came down to duels in Central Park, with Wilson Kipsang of Kenya breaking away from Lelisa Desisa of Ethiopia late, and Kenyan Mary Keitany outsprinting her compatriot Jemima Jelagat Sumgong down the homestretch. In the professional wheelchair races, Australian Kurt Fearnley recorded his fifth victory in New York City while Tatyana McFadden of the United States completed her second-consecutive Grand Slam of marathon wins.

Racing through the Bronx, the men’s runner field whittled down to three, with Kenya’s Geoffrey Kamworor leading compatriot Stanley Biwott and Ethiopia’s two-time Boston Marathon champion Lelisa Desisa through the 21st mile in 4:24. Biwott ultimately prevailed for the win, closing his final 10 kilometers in 28:35. Mary Keitany, also of Kenya, left her final challenger behind in the Bronx, cruising through Manhattan solo to defend her title successfully. In the men’s wheelchair race, South Africa’s Ernst van Dyk won his first New York City Marathon in a decade, besting American Josh George in a late sprint and recording the second-fastest time in event history. Tatyana McFadden of the United States won her 12th-straight major marathon in style, lowering the event record by more than seven minutes.

Having already won the 2015 IAAF World Championships Marathon at age 19, Eritrea’s Ghirmay Ghebreslassie became the youngest New York City Marathon winner in history at age 20, breaking away on the Willis Avenue Bridge. Mary Keitany of Kenya also took the lead for good on a bridge, but much earlier: She dispatched her final challenger on the Pulaski Bridge, near the halfway point, as she cruised to her third-straight victory. Tatyana McFadden of the United States earned her fifth New York City Marathon win, while Marcel Hug of Switzerland won his second five-borough title in the closest finish in event history—the “Swiss Silver Bullet” broke the tape only six hundredths of a second ahead of Australia’s five-time champion Kurt Fearnley.
